Synopsis

Glasgow is a name that evokes vivid images of a colorful past; magnificent ocean liners gliding into the River Clyde and being towed out to sea to begin their adventurous lives, tobacco lords whose determination and skill brought great wealth from the Americas and beyond, superb comedians, actors, and artists. The Glasgow of today is the result of over a thousand years of struggle; to make itself heard, to overcome the hardships of everyday life, and to strike out and succeed in trade and industry, enriching the city while trying to protect its growing population. It is this great ability to survive, a sheer determination in the face of gritty reality, that gives the people of Glasgow their humanity and their humor. Artist and Glasgow resident Charles Jamieson captures the heart of this dynamic city with breathtaking photographs and elegant, insightful text.

West-coasters will love 'Glasgow', a collection of photographs depicting some of the architectural highlights found in Scotland's biggest city... Capturing the beauty of the place and the diversity of its people, Jamieson also provides a commentary to illuminate his images, showing Glasgow's transformation from the second city of the Empire to its current incarnation as a centre of arts and culture. Homes & Interiors Scotland The Glasgow depicted in Jamieson's lens is a confident metropolis striding with purpose. Architecture Scotland Frances Lincoln seems to have cornered the market in descriptive and excellently photographed books. Grange Now! A celebration of all that has made Glasgow great. Glasgow Evening Times This book happily marries the best of Glasgow from the past, in particular some breathtaking architecture, with the stylish developments of the present in what amounts to a fitting tribute to a proud city and its people. Evergreen This book does not purport to be a theoretical treatise; it is written to inform and should sit comfortably on any architect's coffee table. It is a valuable addition to Glasgow's resurgence and captures the city's unique architectural past. Architectural Heritage Society of Scotland

CHARLES JAMIESON is a well known artist described by the Herald as 'one of the 50 most collectible Scottish artists working today'. His work is in collections world-wide. Photography plays an important role in Charles's work and although the imagery mostly ends up as paintings, the photographs themselves are often displayed. Four years ago, a touring exhibition of photographs of Cuba entitled "Mi Cuba" included venues such as Glasgow School of Art and The Dick Institute in Kilmarnock.
