This was recommended to me by my cello teacher, which I took a handful of lessons from as I was traveling. She has had her through the years that took her from a beginning cellist through college. She showed me how she uses it for practice and warm up, even today. It's beyond me right now because I'm going to be mostly learning through books and YouTube, but as soon as I can, this will be my daily warm-up.

Being a cellist, I could use anything to advance in playing. This has helped me a bunch.

I loved the Czerny book from this publisher. This is quite difficult for me because I'm just starting as a cellist, but still it will be good to have daily exercises to challenge myself each day.

This book is a must have for intermediate to advanced players. It really helps build correct technique and develop solid left hand playing. 10 minutes of practice per day is all you need with this book.
