

The book was found

On History

Synopsis

The first English translation of Ecrits sur l'histoire "a collection of essays written over a twenty-year period following publication of Braudel's masterwork, La Méditerranée" On History sets forth Braudel's reflections on the intellectual framework of his historical studies. Braudel calls on the historian to penetrate beneath the surface of political events to uncover and measure the forces shaping collective existence. Cycles of production, wages and prices, grids of communication and trade, fluctuations and climate, demographic trends, popular beliefs "all of these phenomena are proper subjects of the historian's investigations. It is only through study of the longue durée, Braudel argues, that one can discern structure, the supports and obstacles, the limits and his experience cannot escape." The great French historian Fernand Braudel has done what only giants can: he has made Western man confront the problem of time "individual time, historical time, relative time, real time. . . . Braudel, more than any other historian, has wrestled with man's conception of time over time. . . . What a magnificent fight he has fought." "Virginia Quarterly Review

Book Information

Paperback: 236 pages

Publisher: University of Chicago Press; New edition edition (February 15, 1982)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 0226071510

ISBN-13: 978-0226071510

Product Dimensions: 6 x 0.6 x 9 inches

Shipping Weight: 14.7 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 4.1 out of 5 stars 6 customer reviews

Best Sellers Rank: #184,013 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #182 in Books > History > Historical Study & Educational Resources > Historiography #852 in Books > Textbooks > Humanities > History > Europe

Customer Reviews

Text: English, French (translation) --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

this is a text for a joint course in the philosophy of history I'm teaching. I look forward to digging into it.

Augustus said he found Rome a city of brick and left it a city of marble. Fernand Braudel, perhaps the single most influential historian of the 20th century, found history a matter of narrative about famous personages and left it a study of the "structures of everyday life": this selection of polemical essays explains how and why he and the historians of the Annales school borrowed liberally from once-scorned social sciences, and expanded the scope of historical reflection to that of the longue duree. Braudel's major work The Mediterranean and the Mediterranean World in the Age of Philip II studies the Mediterranean region with a liberation from the story of nation-states which was previously unthinkable; from diet to shipping patterns, almost anything seems more important to him than the scepter. These short essays give the principles behind that book and Braudel's other massive contributions to historical science. Unlike French philosophers of his time, Braudel did not desire to appear as a self-starting genius capable of writing on everything: his historiographical suggestions are careful and modest, and a phrase which will be familiar to humanities scholars of recent vintage ("we have learned from X that...") occurs frequently in this book. His friend the sociologist Georges Gurevitch is one frequently cited as a source of inspiration, but one of the most charming essays is on a book about a dilapidated Brazilian mining town written by a "100% American" sociologist and nearly every other human science seems to Braudel a source of important tools: geography and demography are clearly major influences on his historical style. Braudel is also willing to hand out prizes to many other historians, classic and novel. If you are involved with that intellectual pastime mysteriously known simply as "theory", the non-misplaced concreteness of this will be a bit of a relief; if you are a history buff raised on a diet of hagiographic books about the Founding Fathers, best to take a "longer view" with people slightly aware of the significance of revolutions but ready to talk about something else.

Fernand Braudel (1902-1985) was a French historian and a leader of the Annales School (i.e., emphasizing social rather than political or diplomatic themes, and opposed to Marxist historiography). He wrote in the Preface to this 1969 book, "This collection did not originate with me. Two or three years ago, my Polish and then my Spanish friends decided to collect and translate the few articles and essays which I had published in the past twenty years on the nature of history. This volume is the final result." He explained, "A useful understanding has to be arrived at ... that the way to study history is to view it as a long duration, as what I have called the 'longue durÃ©e'... which by itself can pose all the great problems of social structures, past and present." (Pg. viii) He suggests, "There is... a history slower than the history of civilizations, a history which almost stands still, a history of man in his intimate relationship to the earth which bears and feeds him; it is a dialogue which never stops repeating itself, which repeats itself in order to persist, which may and does change superficially, but which goes on, tenaciously, as though it were somehow beyond time's reach and ravages." (Pg. 12) He asserts, "We have already stated our mistrust of a history occupied solely with events. To be fair, though, if there is a sin in being overconcerned with events, then history, though the most obvious culprit, is not the only guilty one. All the social sciences have shared in this error." (Pg. 35) He adds, "sociology and history made up one single intellectual adventure, not two different sides of the same cloth but the very stuff of that cloth itself." (Pg. 69) He clarifies, "As far as the history of the 'longue durée' is concerned, history and sociology can hardly be said to meet, or even to rub shoulders. This would be saying too little. What they do is mingle. The 'longue durée' is the endless, inexhaustible history of structures and groups of structures. For the historian a structure is not just a thing built, put together; it also means permanence, sometimes for more than centuries." (Pg. 75) He argues, "If I stand so strongly against the ideas of Toynbee [or Spengler], it is because these ideas persist in bringing humanity back to the old times... In order to accept that today's civilizations repeat the cycle of that of the Incas, or whomever, we would first have to concede that neither technology, nor economics, nor demography has any very great bearing on civilizations." (Pg. 215) Braudel's book will be of keen interest to anyone studying the philosophy of history, or historiography in general.

Download to continue reading...

World History, Ancient History, Asian History, United States History, European History, Russian History, Indian History, African History. (world history) History: World History in 50 Events: From the Beginning of Time to the Present (World History, History Books, Earth History) (History in 50 Events Series Book 3) History: Human History in 50 Events: From Ancient Civilizations to Modern Times (World History, History Books, People History) (History in 50 Events Series Book 1) Alexander: The Great Leader and Hero of Macedonia and Ancient Greece (European History, Ancient History, Ancient Rome, Ancient Greece, Egyptian History, Roman Empire, Roman History) World History: Ancient History, United States History, European, Native American, Russian, Chinese, Asian, Indian and Australian History, Wars Including World War 1 and 2 World History: Ancient History, American History, and the History of Europe, Russia, China, India, World War 1 and 2, Vietnam War, Cold War, Medicine, Science and Technology World History: Ancient History, United States History, European, Native American, Russian, Chinese, Asian, African, Indian and Australian History, Wars including World War 1 and 2 [3rd Edition] Viking History For Kids: A History Series - Children Explore History Book Edition Caribbean Islands History, History of British Virgin Islands: Early history and People emigration, Antigua and Barbuda, The Bahamas, Barbados, Anguilla ...

Dominica, Grenada, and more four Caribbean Islands History, History of British Virgin Islands: Early history and People emigration, Antigua and Barbuda, The Bahamas, Barbados, ... and Nevis, St. Lucia, Trinidad and Tobago A History of Everyday Life in Scotland, 1600-1800: A History of Everyday Life in Scotland, 1600 to 1800 (A History of Everyday Life in Scotland EUP) History Of The Scottish Nation or The History of The Celtic Church (All Three Volumes): History of Civilization From Pre-historic Times To Medieval Times. Vikings: History of Vikings: From The History of "Rune Stones" to "Norse Mythology" (Thor, Odin, Valhalla, Viking Religion, Swedish History Book 1) The Official SAT Subject Tests in U.S. & World History Study Guide (Official Sat Subject Tests in U.S. History and World History) Fifty Ships That Changed the Course of History: A Nautical History of the World (Fifty Things That Changed the Course of History) Fierce & Ruthless Ancient Warriors That Shaped History: Their Greatest Moments and Violent History (Aztec, Assassin, Vikings, Hawaiian History, Book 1) A Bibliography of English History to 1485: Based on The Sources and Literature of English History from the Earliest Times to About 1485 by Charles Gross (Bibliography of British History) A Brief History of Ancient Egypt : Timelines of History 4th Grade | Children's Ancient History The Thirteen Colonies In The US : 3rd Grade US History Series: American History Encyclopedia (Children's American Revolution History) Christopher Columbus & the Americas : 3rd Grade US History Series: American History Encyclopedia (Children's Exploration History Books)

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help